

HAV

organoponico/citizens of havana

Havana, Cuba, is a world leader in urban agriculture. After the collapse of the Soviet Bloc, food production was decentralized from large mechanized state farms to urban cultivation systems. Today more than 50 per cent of Havana's fresh produce is grown within the city limits, using organic compost and simple irrigation systems.

